

THE ROLE OF FAMILY AND COMMUNITY IN THE LIFESTYLE OF THE NEW GENERATION

M. Mirsaidova

Teacher of Samarkand state university

ABSTRACT

In this newspaper article loving for the motherland honesty, bringing up the young generatio with rich outlook and knowlandge and such kind of ideas are writ ten.

Key words: human, education,civility,society,mature,parents

The social, economic, cultural and spiritual development of the Republic of Uzbekistan is realized through the formation of a harmoniously developed person. A well-rounded, mature person is mainly highly educated, innovative, cultured, moral, hardworking, educated, physically and mentally healthy, knows his rights, loves his country, is active, and spiritually. it must embody human values such as wealth.

One of the urgent tasks of our society is to bring up the young generation, who will create the future of our great Motherland.

Bringing up a person in a comprehensive and harmonious way is an important dream of our people.

A perfect person with high qualities is mainly brought up in a family. No other social influence is so great as the influence of the family on children.

If the first upbringing is given in a positive manner by the family, it will definitely have a positive effect. An educated child is a result of the parents' efforts. Parents who see negative, harmful attitudes toward their children will go so far as to pray against them. One day a man came to Ibn Mubarak to complain about his child. Ibn Mubarak asked him, "Have you ever prayed for your child?" he asks. When the visitor replies, "Yes," he reprimands, "You have violated your child's upbringing."

To understand the role and importance of national values in the formation of a child's personality, let us first think about the essence and content of traditions. A person living in a family can be a well-rounded, mature person of his people only if he has a deep knowledge of the history, way of life, culture, psyche and spirituality of the national values and traditions of his people. A well-rounded person, in turn, tries to pass on the ideas and experiences he has learned in his family life to the next generation. This teaching is the basis for the continuation of family and social life. Also, if the most valuable and useful traditions of our great ancestors in family life are not taught to the younger generation, the family experiences that this country will pass on to the next generation will also be in crisis. As a result, the nation will disappear.

The upbringing of a spiritually and physically harmoniously developed generation is not only a national need, but also a matter of national importance - a common goal for all fraternal peoples born and raised in our multi-ethnic Motherland. At this point, national and universal values, the best traditions of our rich spiritual heritage, and emerging new traditions come together to become a powerful factor in education. To further shape these factors, we must first guide our young people by our good deeds as an example.

Our parenting books say that children are the basil of the family until the age of seven, that they can smell and taste, that they are servants of their parents from the age of seven to fourteen, and then they will be either your enemy or your friend.

From what we have read, it is clear that in teaching something to anyone, including a small child, discipline should not be given in the form of harsh commands and coercion, such as do it, do not do it. Experience has shown that setting a good example in any parenting process works best.

Therefore, it is a good example for parents to follow the example of good and good deeds without explaining them and putting them into practice.

Our educational experience shows that my children begin the process of analysis from an early age, boys begin to do what they saw from their fathers, girls begin to do what they saw from their mothers, so in our wise people , the fleece he saw from his mother will die”,

Hard work is carried out in the family, in the community, in the educational institution, in the process of diligent performance of community tasks, that is, in the service of the development of the Motherland, these categories are formed.

Faith is formed in the process of striving for higher spiritual maturity.

Participate in positive activities and activities in the family, community, educational institutions, community, people to implement neuronal and creative ideas;

Physical maturity is achieved through regular maintenance of one's health in the environment.

We can see that all these activities and regulations are one of the traditions of our people, the upbringing of a harmonious and developed generation is a process of cooperation between the community, family and school.

REFERENCES

1. O. Hasanboyeva “Family...”
2. Ulugbek Sultonov. Etiquette of parental service. Publisher. “Sano-standart”. Tashkent-2017. {31p}

